Oille Gates Recalled.

District Attorney Lewis asked that

Mr. Carter Interrupts.

Mr. Hill Carter, of counsel for the defense, interrupted the witness; "This is going too far. The indictment states specific instances, and the witness is testifying in regard to shipments of which we know nothing," said Mr. Carter. The defense noted exceptions to the evidence.

"Do you know whether correspondence in regard to these shipments had to go to Mr. Gilbert?"

"Certainly. In several instances we paid claims rather than have them go through regular channels. We wrote South ourselves and got information about the claims."

"Did this correspondence go to the railroad files?"

"No."

Judge Lewis: "Suppose shipments as you say were made from Johnston to Johnston, and there was a claim. Who should pay it?"

"Was the expense bill you took to Mr. Gilbert in every way like a gentuine one?"

"Yes. There was nothing to appear wrong."

"It do as far as I know. I thought the local rates had been substituted for the liceal rates had been substituted and admitted in evidence. The cross-examination was confined almost entirely to a repetition of questions asked before the commissioner. Gates explained discrepancies in saying that in the former hearing Attorney Marble had fired questions at him so fast that he could not answer intelligently, and that since he had been substituted for the through rates, were intelligently, and that since he had been substituted for the through rates, were intelligently, and that since he had been substituted for the through rates, were corrections. What did he say?" Attorney Marble had fired questions as the had talk since he had been considered that it would have been entirely partitionally the substitute of the shipments before the case to L. H. John soon but had not gone fully into detail the substituting "feet" was allowed and the say that the reconsigning orders were partly in the handwriting of the wittens could not say how long such an examination would take the field in the set of the said that the reconsigning orders were partly in the handwriting of the wittens and partly in that of the accused Mr. Carter referred to an expense bill, as having been forged. Gates promptly corrected him in substituting "feet" to other's filed in the case, and have to do with the shipments.

The witness was turned over to Mr. Marble, of the prosecution, who asked:

"You say you did not tell Gilbert how you intended to perfect the result of this rebuiling?"

"It said that I did not."

"What did you meen, in your testimony before Commissioner Lame, in saying that you were down and out?"

There were objections, but the verbiage of the question was changed and the witness was allowed to respond.

"I meant that something would have to be devised to meet competition, as the rate from other Southern effect into Carolina was less than that from Richmond. We could not stay in business unless some means was found whereby we might decrease the expense of shipping."

This question concluded Mr. Marble's redict examination. Mr. Carter asked:

"Did you state that your employer,

"Did you state that your employer, Mr. Johnston, did not know of your agreement with allbert?" 'I did."

Mr. Marble: "He stated that Johnston know something was going on, but did not know exactly what."

Gates left the stand at 3:25 o'clock.

Freight Clerk Called.

Samuel M. Chappell, chief clerk at the Nint Street freight station of the Chesapeake & Ohlo, was next called. He has held the position twelve years. His dutles are to take charge of all freight at the depot. He works under the direction of Gilbert, and subject to his authority.

Chappell produced the forged expense bills in Commissioner Lane's hearing. These papers, together with bills of lading for the shipments out of Richmoud and reconsignment order of Richmoud and reconsignment order issued by Gilbert, were handed the witness. He identified the papers, and the defense allowed them.

The papers referred to shipments forming the basis of eight of the nine counts in the indictment.

They do. We investigate along the lines asked for, and send them to the claim agent. In 1907 the claims came to me through Mr. Gilbert.

"Did you in 1997 have claims of W. R. Johnston not settled in the ordinary course?"

R. Johnston not settled in any course?"

"I think so."

Mr. Carter objected to the line of questioning. He held that such claims could be proved by records in the freight office. The objection was over-ruled and an exception noted.

In reply to a question by Mr. Marble the witness said that he did not handle the claims personally, but referred them to a clerk. "I cannot of my own knowledge tell what became of the claims finally." This line of questioning served to bring forth repeated objections.

Mr. Chappell explained that he could not fell who the clerk was who handled the Johnston claims, but further interrogatories disclosed the fact that the claims had finally been referred to Gilbert, and some of them shown to Gates, who took possession.

Investigation Under Way to Ascertain Cause of Explosion by Fire Engine.

inquiry will be ordered into the cause of the explosion which damaged a fire engine at Fourieenth and Main Streets while on its way to a fire lest Tuesday night. Passing over a manhole, a sudden explosion of gas caused the can to its way to a fire lest the cap to its up, damaging the engine and endangering the alives of the men. It was at first supposed that sever fast lind collected in the machiole, the accident having been caused either by concussion as the heavy engine rolled over the cap, or by sparks dropped from the breedow. Investigation has led to the belief that there is a leak of more or less extensive proportions in the large gas main under the street, and that the escaping gas has done the damage. Should this be established, it may lead to the relaying of the principal connections from the Lower (as Works to the upper part of the city. Officials of the Gas Works and representalities of the Gas Works and representatives of the Fire Board and of the electric company are joining in an examination.

A much more serious explosion than the one in question occurred at Twelfth and Main in 1905, when a large part of the street was forn up following the passage of a fire-engine over the cap of a manhole.
